Communism:

Far Left

Republic

Nationalism

Government controls everything, runs all elections

Everyone is part of a union

No Free Trade

Required work for all

Collectivized farming

Everyone is paid the same

Redistribution of profits

No private property rights

Very strict police state (no giving out food for free)

Barely any culture

Promotion of family/ worker dependent.

All laws

In between poverty level and middle class living standards

Socialism:

Left Wing

Republic

Nationalism

Guaranteed work

Cannot work over a certain amount of hours

Nonprofit hospitals and education system

Government controls everything almost everything

No private sector

Strikes banned

Redistribution of wealth

Little democracy if any

Citizens vote on issues

National Socialism:

Center

Republic

Nationalism

Everyone part of the same union

Strikes banned

Must go to work for welfare benefits

Barter system

Fixed wages with managers making more (can earn extra if you work more over 40 hours)

Redistribution of profits

Tax incentives and funding for building infrastructure. Taxes used for purchasing goods from other countries.

Stock brokers can only be government employees

Private Property Rights

Boom the economy by investing in it and then let it bust, keep repeating

Quotas on fields of occupation

Workers of the "mind and fists"

Strong culture and tradition

Banned intentional capitalistic shortages

Citizen's work based on skill, not wage

Patriarchy

Government run schools and private schools

Ability to fire employees at any time

Strong belief in the family

Representatives from each field of occupation

Self determination

No Free Trade

Conservative:

right wing

no unions

low corporate tax rate no monopolies, government-controlled competition, government investments for profit schools

no workers rights

no stimulus

no social classes

many layers of different wealth classes

Fair trade

Capitalism:

Far right

no government

no stimulus

only consumption tax

Globalism

Multi-national corporations (CFR)

free trade

many layers of different wealth classes can be as rich as you want

Liberal:

It doesn't qualify, it is illegitimate

Globalism

Protecting people from firing (unions)

Democracy

Work whenever you feel like it price fixing (yikes)

High minimum wage

No private property rights

Worthless currency

Nonprofit hospitals and education system

Multi-national corporations (CFR)

No private sector

No ranks, equality for all (no trophies)

Redistribution of wealth (for pensions, free college, etc)

Citizens vote on issues

Social Security

Negative culture

Does not believe in a family-oriented society (California)

Bankrupt, zero savings

Multiculturalism

Disarm all nations to bring us "peace"

Open borders

Climate change hoax

Strikes encouraged

No social norms

Matriarchy

Feminism

Universal healthcare

Free Trade

DEI

50% capital gains tax

All other schools of thought are taught as "theft." One school of thought

I want to say that in theory, I would want Communism as many would. However, Conservatism produces much better results. For Communism to work, everyone would have to believe that everyone puts in an equal amount of work, yet people want to live more fulfilling lives beyond work; they want incentives to work. What I am trying to say is that people want a higher pay, more hours, and rewards for doing such.

Soviet Union- Socialism (after 1960), Republic, poor/middle class, state runs all businesses, planned economy, unions, no questioning the state, food rationing, request a car, one party, closed markets (whoever was most profitable got the best deal), state atheism (no religion allowed), communism as the religion (false dialect materialism philosophy), can't protest/can't leave, state controls what goes on the shelves (why do that?). All laws, no free markets. This had failed because they had too much of a hold on their companies and did not let them crash, they had no open markets whatsoever, none of them could be built up. The dictator makes all the decisions in the Soviet Union.

USA- Capitalism, Liberal, poor/middle/upper class, privatization of all businesses the rest is government run whether local state (schools) or federal (military), freedom of all religions, country goes by what is most profitable (within reason), two party, freemasonry with zionism/other faiths, open markets of all countries, what people buy is what goes on the shelves. All freedom, no laws in markets, the marketplace is open for trading amongst all countries.

Notice how conflicting these two countries are, they are opposites.

Capitalism and Socialism is the same belief. The difference lies in what to do with the taxation collected. They use it to create a welfare state, give the money to college loans, or give the money to unions instead of investing the money and planning to help those who are unemployed. At the end of the day, your rent will still be too high, and you will be incapable of saving money. This is why many socialists love having high taxation because their home values go up and no one can afford to live near them. The goal of capitalism and socialism is to get you to spend your whole paycheck on rent or other utilities and to find out where the most profitable areas are to exploit them. Often, we are gentrified out of our own states and are forced to work more hours. The people in power knew that the citizens would fight back by having fewer kids. However, they found someone else from overseas who is willing to drive two hours to work every day and will work over 60 hours a week. Meanwhile, you get moved to a city that has been neglected where the crime rate is high and there is no room to work your way up. This is why homes are built so close to highways, the point is to get the workers right to work. I am ok with having cities that are poor and have people who don't want to work live there since there is nothing else, we can do about it. My gripe is with cities where workers drive into there, what sense does it make having people on welfare live there? The whole point is to bid up prices for the landowners. If anything, the citizens driving into the city should be stationed there. We can set up trains so they can go to destinations of interest.

Close the CFR:

make it a criminal offense to leave our nationalistic views by opening our markets, limit them make our currency be backed by our assets that we own make it illegal to buy up our natural resources. Make it so there is no monopoly and have a controlled market over them.

make our large banks be government owned through the country owning the shares of them.

make "socialist" redistribution of wealth parties/state owned illegal, also make far right (capitalism) parties illegal. We will make a unitary state presidential terms are ten years and can serve as many as he or she wants.

give a certain percentage of all shares to citizens (probably 30%). Tax citizens to fund it.

create limits on how many immigrants can come in and can become citizens.

make spending caps and trade surplus requirements create a constitution and a true republic make all schools for profit and set educational standards. Teach students about current events and show them each perspective and what countries gain from winning wars. Explain our enemies in an unbiased manner while still spending time explaining our system and why it is in place. Also set government quotas on how many students can go in a certain field.

give citizens I.D.'s which shows their skill/occupation. Have representatives from each area such as education, medical, farming, etc. This will help us understand who to invest more money in.

create reasonable tariffs on what is imported and exported. This is to prevent too much shipping jobs overseas and expanding too far lower taxes to 15% for corporations and individual income create tax incentives for investing in the economy

end all bond programs. print money to fund projects teach corruption and the dangers of it. Also teach why people defected from certain movements. We need to be objective when researching history.

Ban all foreign workers.

Have a two-party system of centrist (independent) and right wing, this will be used to put the right wing in check which will be the dominant party.

Allow states to leave the confederacy so long as they declare neutral/ not against us for wars. We will defend them from foreign enemies.

change college acceptance levels to a 1960's percentage

What we want is independence and nationalism abroad. We want to be the leader in opposition against both SCO and NATO. We can appeal to other countries by giving them full independence and having no say in their elections. We will also shield them from the two groups. Countries such as Vietnam will join us because we do not look for hegemony, simply to be the leader of the team. More countries will join in when they see that they have the most say and they have the highest position. We still need them incase China invades. So long as they agree to our set of human rights and independence, they have our full support. Our movement is anti-global because we look to protect each country in our team.